

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A task switch from a first data processing task to a second data processing task can be accomplished by the first task calling a function which saves the first task's context, restores the second task's context and then returns. Because the second task's context has been 5 restored, the called function actually returns to the second task, thereby completing the task switch.

T 0022T 6688200T